Foundation

Foundation Options

Slab Foundation

- Least expensive.
- Property must be graded relatively flat.
- Consists of poured concrete slab with depth to support interior walls.
- Generally suited for warmer climates.
- To get the foundation up off the ground in wet areas, you may consider a Raised Slab Foundation.
- Raised Slab Foundation consists of reinforced concrete block some 3 feet tall, interior back-filled with sand, and concrete slab poured as the floor system.

Crawlspace Foundation

- Generally preferred for most homes especially if the lot slopes.
- Allows for utility, and sewage lines under the home.
- Consists of reinforced concrete block some 3 feet tall around the perimeter of the home with structural piers located under load bearing points.

more information at: <http://www.howstuffworks.com/house4.htm>

Basement Foundation

- Most expensive type foundation. Can be used as additional working or storage space.
- Find lots that slope up from front to back to avoid excessive fill or steps in the front of the home.
- Define type of basement: walk-out daylight basement or cellar type
- Will your basement be finished or unfinished.

Chimney

- Describe type of chimney and number based on the number of open fireplaces in your home.
- Note that gas-only fireplaces do not require a chimney.

Termite Infestation

- Test your foundation for termites. Eradicate any infestations prior to laying your foundation.

Framing

Type Framing

Wood Framing

- Wood framing most commonly used in home construction.
- Plenty of skilled contractors with wood framing experience.
- Can be easily cut and fitted.
- Preferable for interior design when hanging fixtures and decorations.

Steel Framing

- Steel framing growing in popularity, especially in tornado and hurricane prone areas.
- Stronger than wood. Can withstand some wind surges.
- Resistant to fire, mildew and molds, and wood-eating insects.
- Geometrically perfect for corners and window/door frames.
- Skilled contractors may be limited in your area.

Framing Considerations

Once the framing starts, it can become very expensive for a structural change. It is very important that you plan your renovation project up-front before framing:

See size dimensions page 2

- Plan for all doors.
  - Plan for all windows.
  - Plan for all closets and ample storage areas.
  - Plan for all room dimensions.
  - Plan for all fireplaces
  - Plan for all outside venting systems
  - Plan for all stairways and home entry.
- Inspect spacing for HVAC, plumbing, and utility lines.
